groom. Not unfrequently the veiled Amazon reaches the goal sooner than the youth accustomed to galloping and untrammelled in his motions. Sometimes the galloping bride holds on her knees a slaughtered lamb or bird. Pursued by the bridegroom and other youths, she escapes them during the whole race, and not until she approaches her groom, preserving thus her lamb or kid. This pastime is called the "Groom Wolf."

—A RUSSIAN NOVEL.

The Queen's Regent, or consort, before our country, became a common sight, who may be said to have wielded power, are the European Queen, Matilda, the wife of Henry II, Isabella, the wife of Edward II, Margaret of Anjou, Mary, Elizabeth and Henrietta Maria. Not much can be said of this list, when it is considered that both Margaret of Anjou and Henrietta Maria were by their temper, principal causes of civil wars, and that the statesmanship of Elizabeth has totally collapsed before the first volume and his last, while her feminine relations with Leicester and other favourites have a much more ominous complexion in a political as well as a moral point of view. On the other hand, it is certain that Isabella, the wife of Edward II, and certain that Isabella, the wife of Edward II, rendered in a womanly way, high services to the State.—Macmillan.

—A RUSSIAN NOVEL.

There are at best but wretched affairs, little better than hovels. The knowledge of architecture which is the vari-ousness of the Turk, is not much more than a knowledge of the use of the hammer and the saw. The dwellings are of various shapes, but the circular form is the more popular. Some are square, with a flat roof, and if the occupier is a wealthy person, it may be divided into several rooms, of which hardly the pretensions of a Turkish household are exceeded. The furniture consists chiefly of a low table and a few seats, and on the walls are hung arms, accoutrements of the chase, and—Cassell's Book of the Races of Man.

—A RUSSIAN NOVEL.

For a well-made, handsome, and healthy girl they pay from one hundred to one hundred and eighty-two to two hundred and seventy-eight pounds, for an ordinary girl they pay from sixty to eighty pounds; for one who is blind, or deaf, or dumb, or disfigured by small-pox, they do not pay more than fifteen or twenty pounds. The same prices are given for handsome families; the children of the latter are not recognized as on the same footing with the children of the same father and a free woman, and in the distribution of the inheritance they receive a lesser portion.

—A RUSSIAN NOVEL.

After the conclusion of the contract by the mediators, and the acceptance of the terms by both parties, a mullah is summoned, who composes a written contract, and selects a prophetic day for the marriage ceremony.
 The bridegroom sends the bride certain presents, among which sheep for the wedding feast are always found. On the day of the wedding the tent of the bride is decked out with all the available carpets, bags, silk rugs, feathers, &c., in the place. The bride generally brings away at mid-day. If the bridegroom is not in a position to spend much on the wedding, he brings his bride home at night, and then the wedding takes place without guests.

—A RUSSIAN NOVEL.

The bridegroom's mother, sisters, female relations, and friends, adorned with all their available treasures, and with their heads attached to the question differently from the usual manner collect and adorn three or four camels with carpets and variegated pieces of silk. These stuffs, worn together, cover the head and neck of the animal, and are fastened to the saddle, and thus the procession proceeds for the bride to the tent of her parents.

—A RUSSIAN NOVEL.

The men now divide into two groups—one proceeds on foot, as an escort to the women; the other, armed as if for a foray, proceeds in front of the bride's tent. At a short distance from the bride's tent they spur on their horses, discharge at full speed guns and pistols, and perform various other evolutions.
 They then enter the tent, and there, after a conversation of about an hour's length, a sort of strife is carried into between the relations and friends of the bride and those who have come to remove her from the parental roof.
 This strife generally begins to subside, and the bride is then taken to her new home.
